1	Body: used to install, fix and support all components of the packaging machine and meet the requirements of mutual movement and position. The body needs to be strong and stable.
2	Packaging materials sorting and supply system: a system that cuts or arranges packaging materials into lengths, and then transports them one by one to a predetermined station. For example, wrapping paper supply and cutting mechanism for candy wrapping paper. Some can sealer supply systems can also complete the orientation and supply of can lids.
3	Packaging execution mechanism: This is a mechanism that directly completes packaging operations, including mechanisms that complete packaging, filling, sealing, labeling, and binding operations.
4	Finished product output mechanism: a mechanism used to unload the packaged products from the packaging machine, adjust the direction and output. The output of some packaging machine equipment is completed by the main transport mechanism, or unloaded by the weight of the packaged product.
5	Power machinery and transmission system: The power of mechanical work is usually the electric motor of modern packaging machinery, but there are also gas engines and other power machinery.

Main conveyor system: used to transport packaging materials and packaging items from one packaging station to another in turn. However, the single-station packaging machine does not have a transmission system. Since the entire packaging process is usually distributed in multiple stations on the packaging machine for coordination and completion, a special organization is used to package packaging materials and packaging items until the product is exported.
